Carter Candidate Tim Sweeney Makes Startling Charges and Important Predictions—What the Program for Today Includes—How the Hot Line Stories Have Set Everybody Talking—The "Agents" and Their Acts—Where They Belong in the Scheme.

A strong, mysterious hand is the official bulletin, to-day in the Burlington committee rooms. After the developments of Saturday it was thought quite likely that Sage and perhaps Gould would be arrested in United States warrants. This sensational statement by the prosecution, but no action was taken, it being decided that constant surveillance of Sage's movements was all that was necessary at the present stage of the game.

Notwithstanding the apparent inactivity that prevailed a great deal of important work was done. A couple of Burlington attorneys were kept a good part of the day getting further evidence so far as it was considered necessary at present. United States District Attorney Burke, Superintendent Bonfield, Collier, and others were closeted several hours in the afternoon in a secluded room on the fourth floor. They had before them sheets and extracted from the telegraphic correspondence between Sage and the "agents." It is contended that the part of the conspiracy given by yesterday's developments is now complete, and that nothing but the shape of evidence by the prosecution. The Burlington people are confident in that the story of the plot to terrorize is being corroborated with great rapidity by facts.

Unless something unforseen occurs to change the program today's proceedings will be decidedly important, and in any event interesting. Sheriff Hoffman is expected to call his story of the dastardly conspiracy, and Warren Sweeney is to put more flesh upon the skeleton. The only witness of importance who has not yet appeared, and who will be necessary to make the chain complete, is Mr. Sage himself. Whether he will be forthcoming is a question that is being asked on every hand. Sage don't give a particularly fine personal description of himself, after having encouraged the hope, by what he wrote to Sheriff Hoffman, that he would be on hand. He says he wants to work for the "G." and has to be taught all to understand. The constituents began to take an unfavorable view of the situation when Sage failed to appear at Justice Gilder's office on Saturday morning, as he had promised to do. Sage's letter to Hoffman, which was published yesterday, was considered by the Burlington people as a virtual confession of guilt, and they were correspondingly disappointed when Sage failed to appear. WEALTH FIELD OF LABOR.

The Rev. Mr. Cox Advises that It Be So Considered.

The Rev. C. F. Cox preached at the Universalist Church yesterday morning on "Labor, or Women a Business Life," and showed himself to be an earnest advocate of women in her fight for recognition in business and politics. He took the ground that Christ was a laborer, and that the Apostles were laborers. He said that the world of labor was the world of God, and that women should be encouraged in her fight for recognition in business and politics. He took the ground that Christ was a laborer, and that the Apostles were laborers. He said that the world of labor was the world of God, and that women should be encouraged in her fight for recognition in business and politics. He took the ground that Christ was a laborer, and that the Apostles were laborers. He said that the world of labor was the world of God, and that women should be encouraged in her fight for recognition in business and politics.

"Women," said Mr. Cox, "are often driven to business by necessity, sometimes by misfortune, sometimes by choice, but they are entitled to it, and to the same pay, when they perform the same work as men. Men and women are equal before God, and should be equal before the law. Women are the equals of men in their capacity for labor, and should be equal in their wages. Women are the equals of men in their capacity for labor, and should be equal in their wages. Women are the equals of men in their capacity for labor, and should be equal in their wages

"The Tattler" Completes Its Chapter of Romance from Real Life—Interesting and Many Weddings Which Brought Only Sorrow and Suppression to the Young Ones—A Few Which Turned Out More Happily—Some Interesting Narratives.

The Tattler today completes the record of its most interesting of elopements and hurry weddings. In these narratives the story of romance will find many an interesting incident, but the element of marriage and the question, who were and who were not fitted for the pleasant and more bitter lessons of married experience—will soon become evident with each succeeding chapter. These articles will find lively interest everywhere in the story of the young folk which has so greatly delighted in the page of similar stories printed in The Tattler. Those contributed—the record of all these romantic marriages, which are usually rash and ended, to many to repentance when it is too late, while the elopements which are hurried down the line ended, sometimes not in love, misery, or death. Altogether this is a story covering in many cases with much pain and thoughtfulness, but in the most part with an emotion of romping features that is interesting, but here is profitable to be thinking.

AN ABANDONED BOY LOSES WORK.

Was Started Out of Boston Night and Now Asks to Be Reinstated.

Boston, Mass., July 31.—(Special.)—A correspondent of The Tattler was chatting with the City Marshal of Chelsea today when a well-dressed lady of about thirty-seven years old. She was accompanied by a boy of about seven years old. The boy was carrying a small satchel and had evidently been crying. The lady was evidently a lady of refinement and culture. She told the Marshal that she had brought the boy to him. There were tears shown in her eyes. There were tears shown in the eyes that told of some heavy sorrow in the past.

"Do you know who that lady is?" asked the Marshal.

The reporter confessed his ignorance.

"That is the wife of J. Irving Tilton," continued the officer. "She eloped with a girl named Nora Livingstone about four years ago and is living with her now in Chelsea. She has a child by her husband. But the boy was left with parents. But now he's probably for sentence with his mother, the money has all been spent and the boy is starving. Tilton confessed to me that he had left the boy with his parents. He said he was going to get a divorce from his wife and marry the girl. He said he was going to get a divorce from his wife and marry the girl. He said he was going to get a divorce from his wife and marry the girl
